ARIZONA SUPREME COURT CREATES STATEWIDE FAMILY LAW RULES

The Arizona Supreme Court has adopted a set of statewide, uniform and comprehensive rules for family law cases, which include divorce, legal separation, paternity, child custody, child support and protective orders. To view the entire text of the new rules, please visit <http://www.supreme.state.az.us/drrc/>.

The rules are the work of a Supreme Court appointed Committee consisting of 16 members from around the state and many more workgroup members who participated in the process.

The goal of the committee's work was to establish a comprehensive, statewide set of rules of procedure for family law cases aimed at achieving fair, effective, uniform and timely resolution of family disputes, using non-adversarial, problem-solving means to the extent possible and appropriate.

Some of the most significant changes to be brought about by the new rules include:

- Comprehensive new rules that strongly encourage problem-solving approaches to resolve family law cases, including the use of mediators, family law masters and parenting coordinators;
- New rules of procedure for temporary orders and post-divorce proceedings, which have never before existed on a statewide level;
- New requirements for the timely disposition of temporary orders at times when families often are in crisis;
- New requirements to ensure the timely disposition of all family law matters;
- A new rule providing for representation of children whose voices are often unheard in family law cases;
